New Realities for Quality Assurance and Online Resources: Reflections on INQAAHE's role within a global framework

With the advent of the many challenges brought about by COVID-19 there is a growing reliance upon online resources and information technologies to support research, data collection and assessment. Much will depend upon the network of quality assurance agencies, their personnel and volunteers to address quality in higher education and service to students.

This webinar, presented by a panel of experts in the field of accreditation, will share their reflections and ideas about rigor in quality review related to online research and publications and how INQAAHE contributes to strengthening the accountability, quality and value of higher education quality assurance.
